You'll Fall in Love with These Most Romantic Getaways for Every Type of Couple

By Kristy Alpert

Whether you're in a serious relationship or just taking full advantage of Cuffing Season, a getaway for two sounds pretty good right about now. Doesn't it?

Except, how do you avoid cheeseball experiences and Couples Retreat-style nightmares? And, how do you find the right vacation for your relationship? After all, what may be exotic and glamorous for some (an Alaskan dog sled ride à deux, for instance) may be too labor-intensive for others.

That's where we come in. We've found some of the coolest, off-the-beaten path options for non-cheesy romance. From creating memories in the outback to hiding away in a remote mountaintop lodge, one of these vacation ideas should be right for your relationship.

If You're Oenophiles: Le Grande Maison In Bordeaux, France

(Courtesy: Le Grande Maison)

Housed in an 18th-century mansion set deep in the heart of the Bordeaux wine region of France, this hotel and restaurant is co-owned by wine magnet Bernard Magrez and the king of gastronomy himself, Joël Robuchon. This rare, exclusive experience is an amazing culinary and design destination. The hotel opened early in December to a few select guests and is set to become one of Bordeaux's best hotel/dining destinations. The chateau features no fewer than 259 Grands Crus Classees de Bordeaux in the cellar beneath the very bed where you will lay your head.
